Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to express my interest in opportunities with your company. My experience in warehouse operations, technical support, and customer service has strengthened my ability to solve problems, work independently, and collaborate with others.

At Welch Packaging, I operated a forklift to move corrugated cardboard bales from the assembly line into shipping trailers and designated storage areas. This work required attention to safety, efficient material handling, and organization in a fast-paced warehouse environment.

As an Operations Control Center technician at Ball State University, I performed routine software and hardware checks, followed incident resolution procedures, and helped users with two-factor authentication and account management. My work supported the data center that hosted essential university services, including websites, online course materials, and student and employee records.

At Amazon, I worked in a warehouse processing customer returns. I helped route returned products through the appropriate departments, resolved discrepancies between received items and product listings, and provided one-on-one coaching on quality standards.

At Lucky's Market, I began as a cashier before becoming Scanning Coordinator, where I managed price tags and point-of-sale software while continuing to assist customers. I introduced an aisle-by-aisle process for distributing price tags that reduced posting time and helped prevent pricing discrepancies at checkout.

Across these roles, I have combined practical problem-solving with clear communication and careful attention to detail. I would welcome the opportunity to bring these skills to your team and discuss how my experience fits your needs.

Thanks for your time and consideration,
Wesley De Witt
